Placing of the Steam Boilers of the Dun-derberg on Board-The Largest ever Constructed. [Frem the New York Herald.]

Seldom have the strength and capability of machinery undergone such a severe test as the derrick E. K. Collins, belonging to the Steam Derrick Company, for the past week, and on yesterday especially.

The transportation of the enormous boilers of the Dunderberg from the foot of Stanton street, East river, to the pier at Sixth street, where the floating leviathan is moored, and the placing of them in their allotted position in the hold, was an entire

The last of the six boilers was safely deposite l in its final resting place at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. On Monday last the steam derrick commenced to remove them to the vessel, and conveyed one every day, finishing on Saturday. The mode of conveyance was startling to those unaware of the strength of the derrick. The boiler was hoisted about twenty-five feet on the boom of the derrick, and held suspended in the air at this height before leaving the pier at Stanton street. The derrick then steamed toward the Dunderberg with this enormous weight on its boom, and the boiler was owered into the hold with apparently as little trouble or derangement of machinery as any ordinary ballast. It took but an hour and twenty minutes from the time the boiler was raised on the derrick from the Etna Iron Works pier until it was in the hold of

To form an idea of the extent and labor of this work, thus successfully accomplished, it is necessary to give the size and weight of the boilers. All other machinemost loving character, she put her head in owers of Oriental fable. The weight of the heaviest boiler is over sixty tons, the height seventeen feet six inches, the depth thirteen feet, and the front twenty-one and a half The fire surface of the boilers is thirty thousand square feet, and the grate surface twelve hundred. The furnaces are sixty in number, arranged in two tiers, ten furnaces to each boiler. With the main boilers there are also two donkey boilers, four furnaces to each, placed immediately forward of the main ones. The smoke pipe is sixty feet in height and thirteen in diamediately eter, with a grating on top for protection. The derrick which accomplished this arous task has a hoist of beam of nearly thirty feet, and the front beom reaches over thirty-three feet from the edge of the scow The distance required to suspend the collers over the hold of the Dunderberg was twenty-nine feet, and the deflection of the boom with such a weight attached was scarcely more than two feet.

Eastman, the Brooklyn Absconder.

Paris, July 21, 1865.—In the Herald, of June 29, I find that certain circles in New York were mystified at that date as to the sudden disappearance of Mr. Smith J. Eastman, provision dealer, school commissioner, and author of the "Fairy Queen correpondence." I dare say you have by this time learned that the venerable but not venerated individual in question absconded with a large sum of money which he became unlawfully possessed of. The exact amount he embezzled I do not know, but I am aware, and so are different New York merchants to their cost, that it was very Mr. Smith J. Eastman, it appears, made up his mind to so k an esylum in the south of Europe, and there live on his ill-gotten gains. He so far carried out his design as to reach Lyons, where he asked and re-ceived hospitality of Mr. Emile Crestin, in who e hands he deposited sixteen thousand that the refugee was an honest bankrupt, and sympathized with him in his misfor-tunes. He thought also that losses and the excessive use of opium had impaired East-man's mind, and this impression was speedily confirmed by a cerebral attack, which made him hand over his guest to the care of Mr. Birnet, who directs a lunatic asylum

The vice consul at Lyons, I also understand, first heard of Mr. Eastman through with him might be secured.

Mr. Parsons, who acts as attorney for some New York merchants interested in this matter, showed himself a smart man on this occasion. I can not fathom the mystery of him. Eastman was reported to the procureur imperial as in destitute cir-cumstances, when M. Emile Crestin had in his possession sixteen thousand five hundred dollars belonging to him. This gentleman, so far as I can gather, gets full credit for acting honestly from Mr. Parsons, who, however, while giving him an opporwho, however, while giving him an oppor-tunity to retreat, though a constable, used rather threatening language, suspected that there was property in his hands. Next day M. Crestin surrendered the sixteen thou-sand five hundred dollars, and declared he knew nothing of the "Eastman case."

The only property seized at the asylum

The only property seized at the asylum was a carpet bag filled with empty opium bottles. It is expected that more money will, from Eastman's agents, be forwarded to the care of Crestin before Eastman, under ionary treaty, will be removed to New York.

RATHER THIN .- An English manufacuring firm has succeeded, after many years' experience, in making a sheet of iron so thin that 4,800 such sheets are required to make an inch in thickness, being one-fourth as thick as tissue paper. The exper-iment was induced by a Pittsburg manufacturer, who wrote to England some time ago on a sheet of his own making, of which it took 1,000 piled one on another to make an inch. The Pittsburger's skill has been largely overcome by his British rival, and

The Result of the English Elections. The elections in Great Britain and Ireland closed on the 24th ult., and the result is definitely known. The new House of Commons will contain, at its opening, 367 Liberals of all shades, and 290 Conservatives, also of various grades. The position of many of the members is, however, very difficult to define. The Liberals are di-vided into Radicals, of whom there are a few, advanced Liberals, moderate Liberals, and Conservative Liberals. The Conservatives may be classified as Tories, moderate Conservatives, ultra-Protestants, and ultra-Catholics. The elements on both sides are inharmonious. Ulster has elected a solid Tory delegation, simply because they hate the Catholics more than the Liberals do. Other Irish districts elect Tories, or at least Other Irish districts elect Tories, or at least men who would support a Tory Ministry, because it is fancied that such a Ministry would lend some support to the temporal power of the Pope. On the other hand, Messrs. Lowe and Horsman, and Lord Elcho, who bitterly opposed all projects for admitting the working classes to the right of suffrage, are reckoned as members of the same Liberal party which includes Messrs. Bright, Mill, Hughes, and McLean, who have been elected especially for their desire to effect a liberal extension of this right.

In the last Parliament, 30 "Liberals' voted against Mr. Baines' bill for extend voted against Mr. Baines' bill for extending the franchise to tenants of £6 houses in towns. Several of these members have been defeated in the late elections, and some others of them have retired without a contest. In the new House of Commons not more than 20 of the 360 Liberals will venture to oppose a moderate extension of the elective franchise, unless Lord Palmerston should prove more stubborn in his opposition than there is reason to expect. Among the prominent friends of America and advocates of the North, we notice that Messrs. John Bright, W. E. Forster, W. E. Baxter, Milner Gibson and T. B. Potter, and Lord F. Cavendish, are returned without opposition: Messrs. T. Bazley, G. S. Lefevre, J. S. Mill, T. Hughes, E. Baines and W. H. Leatham, are elected upon a contested poll, and Messrs. Jacob Bright, E. A. Leatham, and Mason Jones are defeated. Messrs. Roebuck and Gregory, who have been conspicuous as our enemies. who have been conspicuous as our enemi and Laird, the builder of the Alabama a the "rams," are all re elected. W.S. Lind say, whose motion for recognition of the South was pending when Lee surrendered, and Sir J. Ramsden, who was rebuked by Lord John Russell for rejoicing that the "bubble Republic had burst," have retired from Parliament without a contest. Rams den is replaced by Lord Frederick Cavendish, the only English nobleman who publicly spoke in favor of the North in its days of struggle and doubt.

Although the American question entered directly into very few of the contested elec-tions, there is no doubt whatever that the result of our war had a great influence up-on the general course of the peaceful con-test which has just closed in Great Britain, The demonstration here given that popular government has not failed, and the general satisfaction that is felt in England over the popular reported project of the Palmerston non-intervention policy of the Palmerston government, have strengthened the hands of the advanced Liberals immensely. Our example has shown that popular sovereignty is far removed from anarchy; and the Tories are deprived of their most cogent argument against trusting the mass of the people with power.—N. Y. Tribune.

The Harrisburg Telegraph says that a couple of copperheads from that city called on Major General John W. Geary at his home in New Cumberland. Pa. After exchanging courtesies the two copperheads introduced the subject of politics, and commenced abusing the negro, upholding the 'rights" of the South. The Telegraph says: General Geary took the insults (for they were nothing less) of his visitors coolly for a few moments, but the audacity of these cops exhausted his patience, "Sirs," sud-denly exclaimed the chafed hero, steadily looking his visitors in the face, until the countenances of the copperheads fairly blanched beneath the gaze of the soldier; "Sirs, I have hung traitors for saying less than you have just uttered against your country!" Then bursting like a thunder country!" Then bursting like a thunder cloud with anger and indignation, and suddenly drawing himself up to his full grand hight, the soldier of two wars denounced his insultors as cravens and traitors, ordering them to leave his premises, and threatening, if they delayed, to kick them from the room. The rebuke was overwhelming. Abashed and humiliated, the Harrisburg cops hurried away, satisfied that it was dangerous to talk treason in the hearing and presence of John W. Geary.

A GREAT SCARE AT NEWBERN, N. C .- A few days since Newbern was dreadfully alarmed at posters, placed in conspicuous places all over the city, in these mysterious characters:

Here was a plot. The Mayor called upon his officials to tear the incendiary document down, which could mean no less, he supposed, than "Rise, Colored Brethren." When all but two or three were destroyed the agent of Romaine's Crimean Bitters rushed into the Mayor's office in a great passion, complaining of the destruction of his posters, which explained the mystery, much to the Mayor's mortification. He tried to hush up the matter, but so good a joke for the military officers soon leaked out and caused a great laugh at the worthy official's expense, and brought the medicine into greater notoriety than any advertisement could have done. How Grant was Bored at Saratoga--A Woman Wanted to Kiss Him.

[Correspondence of the New York Times.] One of the most prominent of the snob-ocracy distinguished himself above his fel-lows on the occasion of Lieut. Gen. Grant's dining at Union Hotel during his recent visit to Saratoga. Unfortunately the snob had purposely secured seats at a table ad-joining the one occupied by the invited guests. He first intruded himself upon the attention of the General by inviting him to drink a g'ass of wine, no previous intro-duction having taken place. The General at first seemed disposed not to recognize the attention, but finally reluctantly put the wine to his lips, in the vain hope that he would not be intruded upon again. But no, The same individual, a few minutes no. The same individual, a few minutes later, stepped to the General's side. "Did he know Absalom Grant, of St. Louis? Deuced clever fellow—rich as Cræsus—a cousin, perhaps—you must know him?" "No, I have not that honor." responded Grant. "That is very singular." "Don't know him," again responded Grant, in his peculiarly freezing style, such as he can so well adopt to get rid of bores, and which would have sent any ordinary man reeling back to his seat, there to remain during the remainder of the dinner.

A Theatrical Reminiscence. The New Orleans correspondent of the Boston Post gives the following interesting eminiscence of the elder Booth:

M, Lamothe, long connected with the opera and theaters here, has just shown mea curious reminder of olden times. It is the programme of the second and third appearance of the elder Booth at the tneater ance of the elder Booth at the theater d'Orleans, February 21st, 1828, thirty-seven years ago. The play was "Andromaque," Mr. Booth, of course, having the part of Orestes, fils d'Agamemnon; M. Leblanc, killed afterwards in a duel, was Pyrrhus; Labary was Pylade; Rochefort was Phoenix; Madame Chollet was Andromaque; Madame Clozel was Hermione. All are dead except Madame Clozel, who is still living in New Orleans. Madame Clozel says Booth in New Orleans. Madame Clozel says Booth spoke French perfectly, and was enthusi-astically received. So also say the contemporary writers. The representation at that early day was, of course, in French, as also the programme. It has, however, an English advertisement. Mr. Booth also played Racine here the same season. In style the programme puts to the blush those of to-day.

BURSTING AN AMES GUN.—Colonel T. C. Baylor has for some time past been testing the efficiency of Ames' wrought-iron guns at Fortress Monroe. An eight-inch rifle piece was being experimented on Thursday afternoon. At the twelfth round, with a afternoon. At the twelfth round, with a charge of fifteen pounds of powder, and the gun at an elevation of ten degrees, the Ames' wrought iron gave way. The breech of the gun was torn off and hurled against a stockade of oak logs, erected to receive such projectiles. The body of the gun tipped over and fell off the carriage, burying the muzzle in the sand. No one was injured; the officers and soldiers were in the bomb-proof, along side of the gun. The piece torn off from the force of the explosion is two feet ten inches in length. plosion is two feet ten inches in length. The fracture is as straight and smooth as if it had been severed by a knife. The severed fragment contains what was the vent of the gun. In the figures of its length, above given, is included the casabel. This gun was made for a seven-inch gun, and with its original bore was fired one thousand times. It was then bored to the calibre of eight; this, of course, greatly weakened the gun, and the fact of its bursting does not at all militate against the Ames wrought iron guns.

An extraordinary article appeared in the Cincinnati Commercial of Wednesday on the Kentucky election, the chief points of this State will be not a little astonished at the comments of a journal professedly friendly to their cause, and which has from time to time given it able and hearty sup port. The Commercial says:

It is not becoming that a file of soldiers shall stand before the polls, and that officers of the army of the United States shall stand before the polls, and that officers of the army of the United States shall be a standard or the state of the state hold lists of those who are proscribed, made out by irresponsible persons, and prevent them from approaching the ballot-box. That this was done in Kentucky, there is ample and conclusive evidence; and the flavor of this business is too nearly that of the boder artificial courterges in Kensas to perborder ruffian outrages in Kansas to permit it to be passed in silence by any honest We feel that it is a duty to bring this matter before the people, and to remind the madmen in Kentucky, who have instigated and propose to profit by the outrage, that there is not a township in the North where the action of the military of their State, on election day, would be sustained by a majority of the voters. On which we remark, first, that files of soldiers were not ordered to stand before the polls, and if post commanders stationed them there, or brought them to the rolls for any other purpose than to arrest open violaters of the law which civil authorities could not or would not arrest, they exceeded their instructions and will be properly punished. The reports furnished the Commercial by its Lexington correspondent, on the strength of which the editor dashes off his headlong and absurd denunciation of Gen. Palmer, army will mustered out, in accordance with the order to Gen. These deserters are disfranchised by the national law, and are equally with paroled rebels, subject to military supervision and control. Gen. Palmer's speeches on the stump were able, admirable, and as potent for good as any that were made during the canvass. And the sincere and animated sympathy for the cause of freedom, exhibited by the General in his readiness to help it on by this as well as other methods, has won for him the admiration of the Union party instead of its disgust. And that party will not thank a professed Union paper for denouncing in their name an act which they almost if not quite unanimously approve. Had the above paragraph appeared in the Louisville Democrat, it would have been in harmony with its surroundings and not occasioned any surprise. It has the true copper tinge, as has a good proportion of the entire article. Gen. Palmer is an earnest, able, thoughtful man, having actual convictions on current political themes, and a man who is swayed in his public acts, by some sense of the duty he owes to society as one of its members. Such a man is prone to speak out his convictions, and labor to impress them upon the hearts of his fellow men. And the etiquette or taste that objects to this on account of official position is bogus; a pretense, a nuisance, and a sham. We are aware that the editor of the Commercial finds much provocation to be facetious in any allusions to "earnestness" amongst public men. We suppose he doubts the reality of such a thing. Perhaps if he had a little more of the quality himself he would avoid such egregiously blundering criticisms of men who do possess it.

The cars and machinery destroyed are being replace by new running stock, with all recent improvements; as as the bridees and track are again in substantial cond-tion, the well-earned reputation of this road for Speed, Security and Comfort Will be more than sustained under the reorganization of its business.

In addition to the unequalled attractions of natural securey heretofore cone ded to this route, the recent troubles upon the border have associated num rous points on the road, between the Ohio river and Harper's Ferry, with painful but instructive interest. CONNECTIONS
